

Library Update

January 2015

Encourage your students to apply for the Undergraduate Research Fair

York University's third annual Undergraduate Research Fair takes place Wednesday, February 25, 2015 (11 am – 1:30 pm) in the Scott Library Collaboratory. Several prizes \(\$100, \$500 or \$600 each\) will be awarded.

This multidisciplinary Fair celebrates undergraduate researchers and their work, and allows students to showcase their best research project from 2014 in a friendly environment.

Applications are reviewed by a selections committee. Successful applicants prepare a poster and discuss their research project in a poster session at the Fair. To be considered for participation in the 2015 Fair, students must complete an application form and write an abstract (summary) based on their best research project/paper/essay submitted for a York undergraduate credit course between January and December 2014. The project's grade must be a B+ or higher.

Encourage your students to apply online by January 18, 2015.

In this issue

1

Undergraduate Research Fair

2

Citation Management Software
New Journal Requests

Please answer a short survey about citation management software.

Citation Management Software

Citation management software (or reference management software) lets you save citations online and automatically formats bibliographies. RefWorks has been the primary citation management software at York University for many years. However RefWorks has not been able to keep up with new trends that are being offered by other citation management programs and its subscription cost has escalated exponentially in the last few years. Steacie Science & Engineering Library Staff would like to know which citation management software you use (if any) and what features are most important to you. Please take a minute to answer this short survey.

Papers

BIBTEX

zotero

THOMSON REUTERS
ENDNOTE

New Journal Requests

Is there a journal in your discipline that you wish we subscribed to? Please let us know by emailing your subject librarian. All requests for purchase will be considered.